Teaching and Learning Conference

Promoting excellence in teaching and learning

Date: 24 June 2014
Venue: British Library, London NW1 2DB
Save the date for this exciting event

Dear Colleague,

This national conference is being run by the Learning Consortium, a group of Further Education providers funded by the Education and Training Foundation.
The conference is a unique opportunity to hear from those at the cutting edge of research into independent learning. You will also learn from practitioners who have developed an innovative model for improving teaching and learning founded on evidence based practice.
Hear from a number of exciting keynote speakers* and presenters including:

- Baroness Susan Greenfield, scientist, writer and broadcaster
- Professor Stephen Heppell, Professor of New Media Environments at the Centre for Excellence in Media Practice

During the day you will also have the chance to attend seminars and workshops run by sector colleagues who will be sharing their experience in developing teaching and learning excellence.

Register now to receive further information on this stimulating and forward-thinking event.

Fee: £50

I look forward to seeing you on the day.

Yours sincerely,

On behalf of the Learning Consortium.

*Speakers and agenda may be subject to change.

The Learning Consortium – a collaboration of providers committed to improving teaching and learning led by South Essex College in partnership with East Durham College, Franklin VI Form College, The Learning Curve, Walsall College and Wirral MetropolitanCollege.
© 2014

If you would rather not receive emails from us please email: learningconsortiumenquiries@gmail.com

The Learning Consortium aim to develop a whole organisational approach to improving teaching and learning based on evidence based practice using 'The Learning Framework'.